ATTACHMENT II

A survey conducted by PPG Industries, Inc. Glass Divisions on past waste disposal practices also included talks with older employees who were familiar with past plant operations.

Such a discussion disclosed that prior to 1955 when arsenic-pentoxide was used in the formulation of window glass that 15 to 18 barrels of the no longer used arsenic-pentoxide was buried in an excavation on a plant site. No certainty could be placed on the amount in the drums other than the drums were buried.

The excavation was 20 feet below ground level and it was dug for the purpose of burying old plant records and old telephone equipment.

The disposal incident (a one-time thing) occurred at the discontinued PPG Industries, Inc., Works No. 10 plant at Henryetta, Oklahoma. The plant is no longer owned by PPG, and ceased operation in 1974. The facility was purchased by Midland Glass who now operates it as a container glass factory.

The excavation location was directly south of the machine shop at longitude 95°-58'-12"W latitude 35°-26'-41"N to the nearest second.

There are no water wells in the immediate area to the best of our knowledge.
